Mrs. Wile, of Chicago, stated that two Vice Presidents General had been elected from Illinois. She said:

"I object to two Vice Presidents General from the State of Illinois."

This statement caused a heated and prolonged discussion, which plainly showed that there was considerable disconcent and disagreement in the Illinois delega. and disagreement in the Illinois delega-tion, evidently growing out of the Mon-mouth Chapter-admission affair which will come up for discussion probably this afternoon. It was about 7 o'clock Wednesday night that Mrs. Harmon was sitting alone in the dinling-room awaiting the return of her husband, who had gone on a visit to his brother-in-law, C. W. Boyer. Shortly after Mr. Harmon left a man who spoke like, a negro rapped upon the deor and asked if "Mr. Johnson was at home," and, if he was, "did he want to engage a man upon the farm?" Mrs. Harmon replied that Mr. Johnson did not live there, and that her husband did not need any help.

The fellow soon returned with another man and asked if they might come in to warm themselves. Mrs. Harmon refused, and they burst in the door.

"Two burly black men sprang into the room." said Mrs. Harmon yesterday. "Each armed with heavy sticks. One of the men was taller than the other, and one of them had on a black derby hat and while one choked me nearly into insensibility the other tied my hands behind me and lashed me securely to a heavy table which stood in the middle of the room.

"Just them I heard my husband's step as he came up the walk. They heard it also, and as he reached the edge of the porch, which opens directly into the dining room, they sprang out upon him.

"I heard them strike him several blows and I heard his body fall upon the perch floor. He regained his feet and all three came reeling into the room. Finally one of the men struck has a heavy blow upon the head and he fell bleeding and groaning to the floor. The men continued to kick and beat him until I thought he was dead.

"While the struggle was going on I had managed to get my hands loose and was about to run out of the door, when they grabbed me, and raising their bludgeons, I thought my last hour had come. I cried: 'Oh, Spare my life. I am old and feeble have killed my husband; at least spare money—all of it. Go and get it and your may live.'

"I went up the stairs as i into my room, where I had a pisto". Securing it, I turned and was about to step upon the stairs, when the men, who had followed, sprang upon me again, wrenched the pistol from my hand and threw me with awful force down the stairs. I was hurt severely by the fall, but they followed me, and taking me each by an arm, they went upstair again. Arriving there, I told them to go to a room at the other end of the house and they would find the money. They le me and went to the room I had indicate

"As soon as they were out of sight nd, taking it out, I wrapped it into ser eral little parcels, using rags to do with, and threw it under a pile of othe rags which was in the corner.

"After doing this I crept down stairs leaving them yet looking for the money in the rooms upon the second floor, and step-ping over my husband's body, which lay in a great pool of blood at the foot of the stairs, I slipped through the open door, and finally, after much difficulty—I was very dizzy and was bleeding from the wounds they had inflicted upon my fact and body—I reached my brother, Mr. C. W. Boyer's, house."

Mr. Boyer's, house."

Mrs. Harmon in the journey across the fields to her brother's house lost both her shoes and dress, and when she arrived there was almost frozen and her feet cut by the stones. When she entered the door she collapsed and had great difficulty in telling them what had happened. The news was immediately taken to Severn by Mr. Boyer's son, Irvin. Dr. R. A. Hammond, of Jessups, who was passing through Severn as the news arrived, went with the large posse which was quickly organized to the house. Arriving there, they found Mr. Harmon lying in a pool of blood. The room looked like a slaughterpen. Mr. Harmon's wounds were dressed and he was gotten upon the bed. Dr. Hammond said yesterday:

"When we arrived Mr. Harmon was in a semi-conscious condition and suffering from a fractured skull. When I dressed the wounds I noticed much lampblack upon both of the wounded man's hands, and when I examined Mrs. Harmon's injuries the lampblack also appeared in several places on her person.

There is no other way, and the idea that a medicine in itself can purify the blood or supply new tissues and strong nerves is ridiculous and on a par with the fol-de-rol that dyspepsia or indigestion is a germ disease or that other fallacy, that a weak stomach which refuses to digest food can be made to do so, by irritating and inflaming the bowels by pills and eathering. wels by pills and cathartics.

Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets cure indi-estion, sour stomach, gas and bloating fter meals, because they furnish the digestive principles which weak stomachs lack, and unless the deficiency of pepsin and diastase is supplied it is useless to uniderous attack Wednesday night upon Mr. and Mrs. John Harmon, who live alone of "tonics," "pills" and "cathartics," which have absolutely no digestive power, and their enly effect is to give a temporary stimulation.

One grain of the active principle in Stuart's Dyspeptic Tablets will digest 2,000 grains of meat, eggs and similar foods and experiments have shown that they will do this in a gleas bottle at proper temperature, but, of course, are much more effective in the stomach.

There is probably no remedy so universally used as Stuart's Tablets, because it it not only the sick and ailing, but well people who use them at every meal to ensure perfect digestion and assimilation of the food.

People who enjoy fair health take Stu-ert's Tablets as regularly as they take meals, because they want to keep cure, and Stuart's Dyspepsia Tholes do both; they prevent indigestion and they remove it where it exists. The regular use of one or two of them after meals will demonstrate their merit and effi-ciency better than any other argument.

Yesterday morning when a thorough investigation of the premises was made by Magistrate L. G. Kelladgh and Deputy Sheriff E. E. Harmon, pending the arrival of Sheriff John Bowle, who was in Annapolis at the time, it was found footprints in the soft sand approached the house from the south and departed in the same direction. They were those of two men, one of them wearing a large pair of shoes, of which the heel seemed to be gone; the other wore boots about 7% or 8 gone; the other wore boots about 7½ cr 8 in size. The ones leading away from the house seemed to indicate that the men left in a hurry, as the footprints were very far apart. A black derby hat with the stamp of Atlas & Cushing, 67%, upon it was found beside a wagon near the stables, and as no one had ever seen it apon the premises before, it is supposed to belong to one of the men.
